Avecto solutions prevent cyber-attacks.

Avecto's endpoint security software has seen phenomenal demand around the world, where it protects more than 8 million endpoints at some of the largest brands. The company has three international offices and a growing network of channel partners.

The risks and rewards of being first with the Microsoft Surface Hub

Avecto did its research on the Hub but it remained partly a gamble to be one of the earliest adopters, before anyone had really had the chance to explore this multi-functional beast in the field. One of the attractions was that "no one else had one." It was hoped that the Surface Hub would create a stir, internally and externally, and that Avecto would be seen as an advanced business that embraces the latest in converged technology.

Technology... is the enabler

At the time that Avecto's new Surface Hubs were installed, the company was going through enormous change, with office moves and major fit-outs. Neil Proctor, Avecto IT Manager, found in Carillion Communications a technology expert he describes as "very professional, knowledgeable and thorough."

Neil has since asked Carillion to work with him on the plans for further AV installation at Avecto's head office.

New company broadcasts and the potential for collaboration

Avecto directors recently conducted a webinar to the whole company using the Surface Hub and were able to engage with audiences in the US, UK and continental Europe.
